

Three Friends

Three classmates—Joshua, a chess prodigy; Karen, a feminist; and Lori, a sensitive artist—start an unusual friendship, forming a clique of their own. Other kids may think they're weird, their parents may not understand them, but they have each other. Their movies and pizzas and dances until their perfect trio is nearly shattered by the crosscurrents of love and jealousy, of self-doubt and deep pain. What follows is a test of their strengths as young adults, as friends, and as lovers as well. And it very nearly ends in great tragedy.

ReviewsAn illuminating account of the thoughts and feelings of three unusual teenagers. The Horn Book Interesting and well-defined characters, believable and vivid. Bulletin for the Center for Children's Books.A good story, well told. School Library JournalAbout the Author Myron Levoy was born and raised in New York City, where many of his stories take place. His young adult novels frequently depict outsiders often with humor searching for identity and connections, with growing insight into their true selves. Works include Alan and Naomi, A Shadow Like a Leopard, Three Friends, Pictures of Adam, and Kelly n Me.
